Council OKs waiving some project fees

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

Matreyek Homes, Inc., developer of the Upland Hills Country Club, got some financial relief from the Upland City Council Monday night.

The council granted the firm's request that the city waive part of the Street and Traffic Facility Development fees because plans for the $75 million project require Matreyek to provide several new signals for traffic created by the development.

The Street and Light Committee decided last week that Matreyek should not have to pay for signals at 19th Street and Campus Avenue, at Upland Hills Drive and 16th Street, or at 16th Street and Campus Avenue.

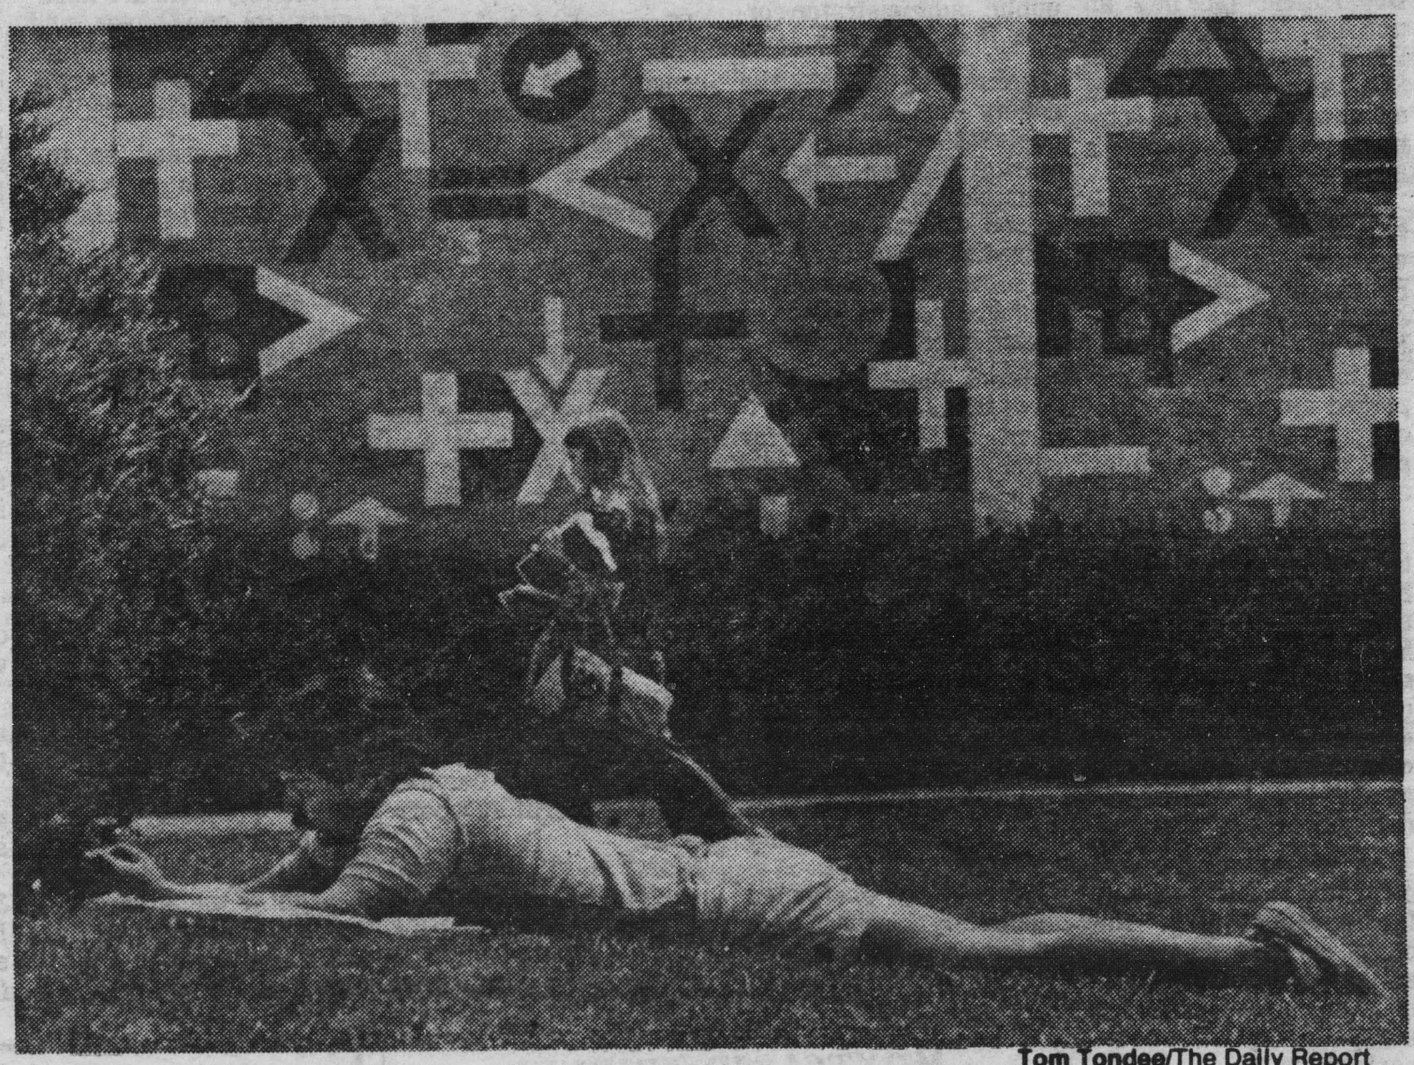

The council unanimously approved the committee's recommendation without discussion. Developer Bill Matreyek contributed $1,500 each to Councilmen Frank Hoover and Frank Carpenter during their recent campaigns for reelection. Neither abstained from the vote.

Matreyek has already paid $16,000 in preparations for the traffic signal at 16th and Campus; the council also agreed the firm should have that $16,000 deducted from the traffic facility fees to be charged.

The council, when approving original plans for the project months ago, approved a list of new traffic signals Matreyek must install. Attorney Bob Schauer argued last month that Matreyek should not have to pay all of the $205,000 in traffic facility fees — $375 for each of the 547 proposed homes — in addition to paying for installation of numerous traffic signals.

The dollar figure Matreyek will save as a result of Monday night's action is not clear. Schauer argued at the March 1 council meeting that Matreyek would pay $85,000 for traffic facilities plus $205,000 in fees without relief by the council. The $205,000 in fees — less the $16,000 for improvements at 16th Street — will still be required, but most of the $85,000 estimated for new signals is not now required.

Matreyek also requested that the city's Park Acquisition and Development fees — $240 per home — be waived entirely because the project will provide a 140-acre golf course for public use. City Manager Lee Travers said this request must be continued another two weeks so that he and the city attorney can determine a legal means to assure the golf course remains accessible to the public for only a green fee.

Dina Hunter resigns Upland school post

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

The Upland School District board of trustees officially accepted a letter of resignation Tuesday night from president Dina Hunter and agreed to fill her seat by appointment instead of special election.

Hunter's resignation takes effect May 16, and didn't take the district by surprise. Hunter pledged during her campaign for the Upland City Council that she would resign her trustee post if elected.

Hunter was one of three people elected to the council earlier this month. She was elected to her second four-year term on the school board last November.

Hunter's final school board meeting will be May 11. Her first City Council meeting will be May 3.

The school board is soliciting interested residents to fill the vacancy left by Hunter. Board members will conduct personal interviews May 12 and 13 and are expected to select the "interim" board member in time for the June 8 regular meeting.

Upland residents interested in serving on the school board should send a resume and a letter of intent to Dina Hunter, President, Upland School Board, P.O. Box 1239, Upland 91786.

The appointee will not fill the remainder of Hunter's four-year term, but will serve until the next regular school board election in November 1983.

In her resignation, Hunter noted that while she has resigned her post as trustee, she has not resigned her interest and support for the students and residents in the district. The board and district staff thanked her for her service.

Upland officers tell residents to listen closely to solicitors

Members of the Upland Police Officers Association are warning residents to listen carefully to telephone solicitors selling ads and tickets on behalf the association.

The association hired Starbuck Productions to sell tickets to its annual benefit show Aug. 22 and to sell advertisements in the Officers Yearbook by telephone. More than 50 residents have alerted police that callers identifying themselves as members of the officers' association are calling and asking for donations.

Officer Howard Harden, association vice president, said no officers are doing the actual solicitation. Any caller saying he is an association member is committing fraud, Harden warned.

Rick Martin of Starbuck Productions said his solicitors tell residents and business managers they are calling "on behalf of the Upland Police Officers Association." They should not identify themselves as members of the association, he said.

Residents should call Starbuck during business hours at 623-2255 to alert management to salespeople who misrepresent themselves, or who are rude.

The solicitors offer to send a Starbuck representative to each person's door to collect the donations. These authorized collectors will identify themselves with an offical card that expires in September 1982, at the close of the fund drive.

Martin said Upland police have a list of authorized Starbuck collectors. Residents who suspect fraud should ask for the individual's name and check with Upland police if they suspect any fraud.

County tentatively OKs sheriff's lab consolidation

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

The county Board of Supervisors tentatively approved consolidation Monday of the Sheriff's Department lab into an unused facility of the Flood Control District in San Bernardino but held off on a decision to combine it with the coroner's lab.

Supervisors left the details of the move to be worked out by Sheriff Frank Bland and County Administrative Officer Robert Rigney. The crime lab now is dispersed among several locations. The new site is part of a county complex at 777 E. Rialto Ave.

Rigney asked the board to hold up final approval because of a request from the Environmental Health Services Department to make use of part of the lab and continuing discussion on the future of pathology and toxicology services for the coroner's office.

Bob Hammock, board chairman, asked to delay for another week the board decision on whether the county should hire its own pathologists for autopsies by the coroner's office.

He said Dr. Irving Root, the county's forensic pathologist under contract, had shown "movement" in negotiations and added, "I think a substantial amount of good can come from a further continuance."

Depending on the outcome of those discussions, lab work for the coroner's office may also wind up in the former flood-control lab.

Acting Public Administrator-Coroner George Kaenel recommended last week that the county give Root notice of termination of his contract, saying the county could save more than $173,000 a year by hiring its own pathologists.

Local Supervisor Cal McElwain suggested that the board should delay any decision on Root's future with the county until after the June 8 primary. Three candidates are running for public administrator-coroner in that election.

Hammock noted the county has an existing contract with Root requiring 60 days notice of termination. Any changes in the contract would be aimed at saving the county money and should be implemented as soon as possible, he added.

Bland volunteered to have the Sheriff's Department do lab work for other county departments with reimbursement by those departments' funds, but stressed that his department needed to be in charge of security to protect evidence at the lab.

"A janitor took a gas can one time and almost cost us a murder case," he explained by example.

Rigney assured Bland that department security needs would be met.

Supervisors postponed indefinitely discussion of a recommendation by local Supervisor Robert Townsend to create an appointed position of conservator and public guardian separate from the elected position of public administrator-coroner.

Rigney said he needed more time to analyze that proposal and other alternatives for possible realignment of the four duties.

In other action Monday, the board approved the purchase of four office trailers for $55,000 to house the staff of the public administrator-coroner's office at the county medical center near the county morgue in San Bernardino.

Water leaks forced the staff out of the basement of the county library and into temporary county offices in San Bernardino.

On Bland's request, the board held up action for one week on a proposed ordinance requiring gun dealers to get licenses from the Sheriff's Department.

Bland said the penal code section is confusing on whether the licensing for retail gun dealers is mandatory or permissive. He asked for clarification from the county counsel's office.

He noted that in one month a gun dealer in the county, whom he declined to identify, sold 277 handguns to one buyer and that "some of them are showing up in Los Angeles in criminal hands."

Bland stressed to the board and to gun advocates outside the board chambers that the ordinance is not a form of gun control.

"We don't want anyone to get the idea that we're enforcing gun control or registration. This is a license. You know I don't stand for gun control."

Bland pointed out that federal licenses for gun dealers are already required. County licenses would allow checks into the backgrounds of gun dealers by the Sheriff's Department, he added.

The state law on the ability of local governments to issue licenses to gun dealers was first brought to the attention of the board in 1975, but no action was taken then, Bland said.

OIA passenger traffic climbing

Passenger use of Ontario International Airport is still on the upswing.

Airport officials reported a 33 percent increase in passenger traffic in March, compared to March of 1981. It was the fifth consecutive month of increases after more than two years of slumping figures for OIA.

A total of 152,357 passengers used the local airport in March, compared to 114,982 in March, 1981.

"We're excited about the numbers, and for two reasons," Airport Manager Robert E. Quincey said. "First, every round-trip passenger using Ontario means an economic benefit of $150 to San Bernardino County and, second, it means more people are becoming aware of the convenience of Ontario airport."

Although this is normally a slow time for air travel, airport officials said traffic at the local facility was up 26 percent during the first three months of 1982, compared to the first quarter of 1981.

Air cargo figures are still mushrooming at the airport. Assistant Airport Manager Michael DiGirolamo reported 8.5 million pounds of cargo were shipped through OIA in March, a 2,500 percent increase over the 324,415 pounds of cargo shipped during the same month last year.

"In the first three months of 1982," he said, "more air cargo has passed through Ontario than during the entire year of 1981 — and remember, 1981 was an all-time record for cargo at Ontario."

DiGirolamo said the first quarter of 1982 saw 21.9 million pounds of cargo processed at OIA, compared to 19.2 million pounds for all of 1981.

The local airport's growing cargo trade is a result of United Parcel Service use of OIA as a shipping point beginning late last year.

Scheduled commuter flights, however, were down 36 percent from 13,872 in March, 1981 to 8,667 last March. First quarter figures for that category showed a 42 percent slump in commuter flights, from 40,561 in 1981 to 22,689.

Chaffey district still unsettled over class cuts

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

With the question of reducing graduation requirements apparently settled, little harmony exists over what should be cut from the Chaffey Joint Union High School District's curriculum.

One side advocates reduction of classes designed for college-bound students while the other seeks to preserve academics at the expense of elective classes.

In a recent workshop session, district trustees heard several opinions on where cuts should be made when graduation requirements are reduced from 220 credits to 200 credits.

The workshop served as a prelude to a board decision scheduled for May 17.

The reduction is proposed to begin with the class of 1983, which will need 210 credits to graduate. Those in succeeding classes will see the requirement reduced to 200.

Trustees sought a reduction to coincide with budget-cutting efforts reducing the school day from six to five periods for most students.

A recommendation from the District Curriculum Steering Committee (DCSC) suggested cuts be felt harder in the elective area where 15 units would be eliminated.

The committee's proposal would eliminate only five units from required "academic" classes such as English, mathematics, science, social studies and "life skills."

Also included in the recommended requirements are classes in driver and physical education.

Electives would include classes in business education, foreign language, shop, home economics and the arts.

The DCSC also recommended that students pass a required course before credit is given. An earlier proposal would have allowed credit to a student who failed a required course.

Elimination of elective units was criticized by those who support work experience and job training programs that allow students to gain credit for off-campus work.

Etiwanda High bid $1 million below estimates

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Tumbling material costs and a slump in the construction industry have cut the price for a new high school in Etiwanda $1 million below estimates.

Bids received from contractors pleased Chaffey Joint Union High School District officials who at one time estimated costs could run about $7.2 million.

Nine sealed bids were opened at district headquarters this week with the low bid of $6.2 million coming from ASR Multiple Construction of Newport Beach.

The next lowest bid was submitted by W. D. Gott of Upland. Only $20,000 separated the two lowest bidders.

High bid was $6.78 million, according to district business manager Russ Dickinson.

"I almost fainted," laughed Supt. Mike Dirksen. "It (the lowest bid) was the first one we opened. I thought it was fantastic."

Low bids have no direct benefit to the district because the school is being funded with state money. But Dirksen predicts the process will now move faster than it would have had the bids come in over estimates.

Had the $7.2 million ceiling been breached, he noted, approval would have had to come from the State Allocations Board which will not meet again for several weeks.

With a bid under the estimate, he said, the go-ahead could be given within a week by the allocation board's staff.

"I'm not too hopeful we'll get more (from the allocation board) than what the bids came in at," Dirksen said in reference to the possibility that the school will now receive more funding for amenities.

High School No. 6, as it is officially called, will be constructed on district-owned land near East and Victoria avenues in Etiwanda. A "bare-bones" facility, the school will house students in eastern and central Rancho Cucamonga.

Freshmen students in that area now attend Chaffey High; those beyond their freshman year attend Alta Loma High.

Dirksen said time schedules attached to the bids show completion near the end of the 1983-84 school year's first semester.

Opening date, he predicted, is now likely to be January 1984.

Does business stress cause high blood pressure?

Stress on the job is a real problem for most of us. Many people think high-pressure jobs cause high blood pressure.

Scientists and doctors aren't sure if stress causes high blood pressure. But one thing is for sure: anybody, no matter how they react to stress, can have high blood pressure.

If you have high blood pressure, you can control it—with medication, weight control, less salt, and whatever else your doctor tells you to do, every day.

No matter what you do for a living... keep on living.

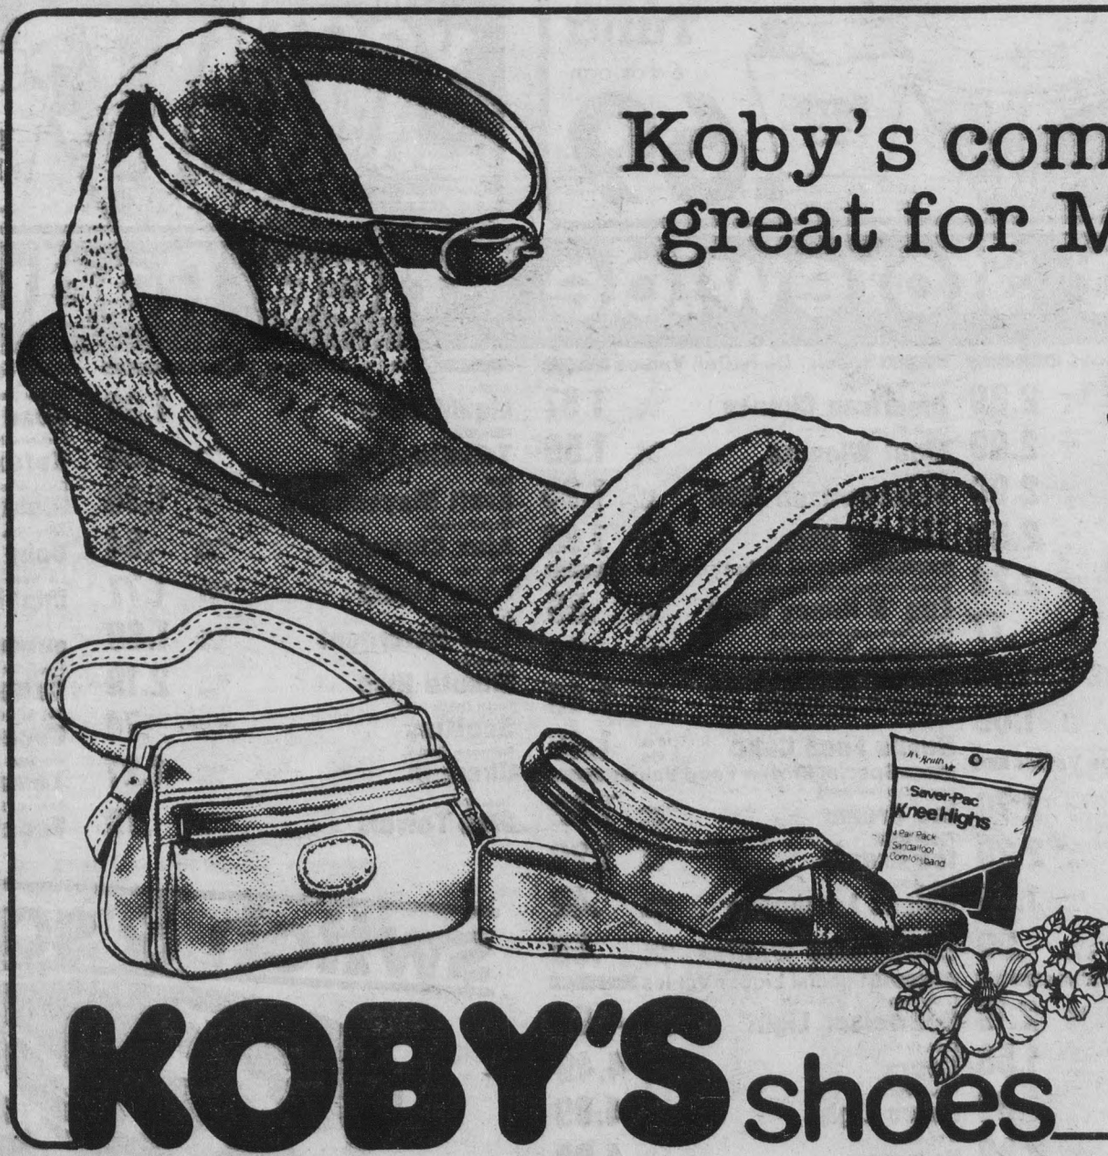

High blood pressure. Treat it and live.

New CIM chief plans to bring stability to prison

By BOB NAGEY
Staff Writer

The woman named superintendent of the California Institution for Men in Chino hardly looks like a prison warden.

At 5 feet 3 inches, her slight frame is nearly lost in the high-backed chair behind the superintendent's desk.

Her smile is broad and friendly and her attitude is open, almost vulnerable, as she discusses her bewilderment at the new world in which she finds herself.

But Midge Carroll is determined to bring stability to the prison, which for the past year has been the subject for scandals, complaints and disputes.

"My first priority is to concentrate on the minimum security part of the prison where all the problems originated," she said in an interview Thursday. "My understanding is that the other parts of the prison are being run efficiently."

Whatever the 45-year-old mother of three does about the prison, it apparently will not stop a state Senate investigation next month into charges of laxity, mismanagement and preferred treatment of inmates — accusations that brought about the dismissal Tuesday of Superintendent Bertram S. Griggs, 61, and his deputy, Fred Cardona, 62.

The two were fired by Ruth Rushen, director of the state Corrections Department, after an investigation by the department's Special Services Unit confirmed there were grounds for those accusations.

A month ago Rushen received an anonymous letter from a group of CIM inmates that complained of special privileges an inmate was receiving. The letter asked for an investigation.

Her probe verified that Enrique Jaime Sandoval, 52, a dapper, small man with expensive habits who is serving a life term for a 1971 double murder, had been escorted to exclusive Beverly Hills shops, been assigned a private office with a well-stocked refrigerator for his quarters, and had been granted several "elective" operations at outside hospitals.

Serving as Sandoval's escort was Alvory Price, CIM's chief disciplinary officer. He has resigned. Another official reportedly involved has been placed on administrative leave. He is Charles Wilcots, associate superintendent.

Griggs and Cardona were escorted from CIM Tuesday night.

According to the reports, Sandoval was able to blackmail several staff members as well as other inmates to do his bidding. In Price's case, he reportedly arranged an $8,000 "loan" for his escort.

The Sandoval case apparently was the last straw in a string of administrative blunders and laxities at the institution.

It followed reports that reached the state Legislature last summer that a select group of inmates had been served T-bone steaks last Mother's Day and published complaints from CIM physicians who contended that changes in security around the medical units were posing a danger to their lives.

Rushen apparently had enough.

She called Carroll, associate superintendent at the Sierra Conservation Camp in Northern California, and told her to "go into Chino and run the prison."

"I had just two days to pack," Carroll said. "The first call came Monday. I was down here Wednesday being introduced to the staff. I'm still in a daze from the speed of it all."

But CIM and the valley are not new to her. She had spent 19 years in the area, first a real estate and civil engineering business with her first husband. When that marriage ended in 1966, she went to work as a correctional officer at the California Institution for Women in Frontera.

"I got into correctional work because I needed a job," she explained. "I moved up the ladder as the years went by."

She transferred to CIM in 1971 and served as a supervising parole agent. In 1972 she moved to the California Rehabilitation Center in Norco as a correctional officer where she was eventually promoted to the rank of lieutenant.

Carroll returned to the women's prison in 1975 and was promoted to captain. A year later she was assigned to the Sierra Conservation Camp as associate superintendent.

Her husband, Glenn, is the administrator for the state Corrections Department's conservation camps in Southern California.

"When it comes to correctional work I'm a conservative," Carroll said. "I go by the book. I'm not an advocate of the kind of rehabilitation that changes an inmate's behavior. I feel it's more important to teach him the basic skills like vocational training, how to fill out a job application and how to survive on the outside. When you succeed in those things your behavior will automatically change."

She contended a basic cause of unrest within prisons is overcrowding. CIM is designed to hold 2,600 inmates. The Thursday count was 3,530 with 800 inmates double-bunking.

Carroll hopes to reduce that high count through transfers or "time off for time worked." But, she added, it was too early to go into details.

As for her petite stature, she said, "I'm not here to fight anyone. It doesn't take physical force to make your presence felt. I have supervised men before. They are people."

As for Sandoval, he has been moved to the medium security building where he spends most of his time in his cell. He does spend some time in outdoor exercise, "just like other inmates in the facility."

Gone are his private office and apartment and supply of food. His connections, if there are any left, are dormant if not extinct.

But those who know him well are not placing any bets about his future. They said they would not be surprised if he made a comeback.

Solving those storage, closet space problems

By Deniece Schofield
Copley News Service

Did you know that about 10 percent of the space in your home is used for storage? That means if you have 2,000 square feet in your home, you need 200 square feet of storage space availabile to you.

How does your storage space stack up? (No pun intended.)

Many of us complain that we do not have enough room for storage. More than likely, we either have too many things or we have not used our existing space efficiently.

Before adding any new storage areas to your home, be sure that you have eliminated unnecessary belongings. Organize the space you have before undertaking any major projects.

Remember the housewife's law — junk expands to fill the space available, plus one room. More storage space may just give you more space in which to be disorganized.

We are all bound to some degree by the architecture of our homes. Thus, when a particular kitchen utensil seems best suited to drawer storage but you have no drawer space, you must start using your imagination.

There are only four storage alternatives. You can either hang things up, store them in a drawer, on a shelf or put them on the floor. So, if drawers are not readily available, ask yourself if the item can be hung, put on a shelf or stored on the floor in some fashion.

Consider the alternatives to come up with a workable, efficient solution.

Alternative No. 1: Hanging.

Here you have a variety of possibilities. Kitchen utensils are easily adaptable to hanging. Most restaurant kitchens store things in this manner so it must be an efficient method.

Items can be hung on pegboard or out of sight on the inside of cupboard doors. Hang most frequently used items near your mixing center and save steps in preparing meals.

In the kitchen and bathroom, look up under your sinks. There is a lot of wasted space up there! Stock pails or ice cream buckets with "extras" or seldom used items and hang them on a nail. They're up out of sight, out of your way and still accessible when you need them.

Many commercial products are designed to help you hang anything from paper bags to the ironing board. Even metal parts cabinets (the kind with all the drawers) can be hung up. If you're aware of the products available, walk through the housewares and hardware departments in your favorite stores. Acquaint yourself with the variety of storage helpers you can purchase.

Bats, rackets and other sports equipment can be hung on pegboard or secured between two closely placed nails. Stored in this fashion, they are safe, visible, easy to find and easy to replace after use.

Here are a few other hanging ideas:

Hang a shoe bag to hold things like vacuum attachments. These pocketed type bags also can hold cleaning supplies, sewing items and any number of things. (Even shoes!)

Cup hooks screwed onto the bottom rod of a wooden coat hanger can hold many items.

Hang a chain around a hanger and attach shower curtain hooks every few links and you've got instant hanging storage.

Sew cafe curtain rings to the backs of stuffed animals and hang them up and out of the way. Or, hang a hammock made of fishnet or fabric and you've got a cozy little bed for the animals to rest in.

Tension rods provide easy hanging storage. Put one up in the doorway while you're ironing and you have a convenient, temporary place to hang pressed clothes. Tension rods also can be used to hold rolls of wrapping paper.

This is just the tip of the iceberg, and we've only discussed hanging! You see how your creative imagination can help with your storage problems.

Learn new solutions to old storage problems. Send for Mrs. Schofield's book, "Confessions of an Organized Housewife." Send $5.95 plus $1 postage and handling to Deniece Schofield, P.O. Box 492, Bountiful, UT 84010.

Irish widows crusade against terrorism

By NORMA MEYER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Georgina Gordon waved from the living room window as her husband and two children started the drive to school in Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

"They got to the front of the window when the car exploded," she said, recalling the incident that occurred four years ago. "It was blown apart."

Her husband and 11-year-old daughter died in their seats. Her 8-year-old son had been ejected and was lying critically injured in the street.

"His eyes were in his cheeks, his hair was burnt back. He looked half dead," said Mrs. Gordon.

Her story is not new. Nor is it out of the ordinary. Religious strife has plagued Northern Ireland for centuries, accompanied by bloodshed on behalf of both the Protestants and Catholics.

Gordon's husband was a social worker and part-time policeman in the province's British local militia. She and two other widows, whose husbands also worked as British security officers, are touring this country to build public support for the police forces and an end to the killings in Northern Ireland.

"Because they wore a uniform, they were a target," said Sylvia Deacon, one of the five founding members of Widow's Mite.

The Londonderry-based Widows' Mite claims to be a non-political and nonsectarian group dedicated to unity in Northern Ireland.

The group said it opposes all terrorism, whether the violence is initiated by British loyalists or supporters of the Irish Republican Army, an almost exclusively Catholic movement to end British rule and Protestant domination.

Yet the widows' husbands allegedly were killed by members of the IRA, and the IRA is the focus of the group's attack. They do not talk of reported atrocities by police officers or terrorists who act on behalf of the British.

The women said they want to convince Americans to stop sending money to the IRA. Their interviews in this area were set up by the British consulate here.

"We are here to dry out their funds because we believe then we can dry out the terrorists," said Bill McMurdo, a Scottish management consultant who is acting as the group's spokesman.

McMurdo was referring to NORAID, the Northern Ireland Aid Committee. NORAID contends it raises funds in the United States for victims of violence and families of political prisoners in Northern Ireland.

Britain has long charged that most of the money is used to buy sophisticated weaponry and explosives for the IRA.

Although there are scores of political and social reasons behind the fighting, the appeal by women of Widows' Mite is emotional.

Their pleas are punctuated with gruesome descriptions of death — reminders that they are living victims of a seemingly endless conflict.

Gordon's son survived the bomb blast, although it cost him the sight of one eye, damaged his hearing and necessitated plastic surgery. She said her other daughter, who was 3½ when she witnessed the explosion had nightmares in the following years. Gordon suffered a nervous breakdown.

Deacon's husband was a full-time sergeant in the Ulster Defense Regiment when he left his wife and four children at home one night in 1973. Deacon said IRA members kidnapped him at a bar and then held him for two days while he was tortured and interrogated.

"His body was found on the roadside," she said. "He was hooded and his hands and feet were tied. He had been shot six times. He was shot in the groin. The last place the muzzle was placed was in his right ear and then they pulled the trigger."

Marlene Wilson's brother and husband both were members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force. Her brother was in a patrol vehicle in March 1972 when machine guns opened fire from behind hedges.

"One bullet came in through the back of the tiny window and caught him in the head," said Wilson.

"Just because somebody decided to ambush the police, he was shot," she said.

Ten months after her brother was killed, Wilson's husband got into his car that was parked outside the police station. A bomb exploded beneath the auto.

"They amputated both my husband's legs to try and save him, but two hours later he died," she said. "They had pumped 28 pints of blood into him but it was coming out just as fast."

California congressman seeks to aid home buyers

By JAMES W. WOODARD
Copley News Service

"The problems facing first-time home buyers are among the most serious concerns in our nation today. I think the vast majority of your readers would agree."

That candid comment was expressed to this writer by a U.S. congressman who places top priority on helping those first-time buyers. And he's actively pursuing solutions to their problems.

Robert J. Lagomarsino, congressman from California's 19th District, has formally prepared and introduced a new bill that would allow individual first-time home buyers to put aside up to $5,000 a year in a tax-free "down payment" savings account. Under his proposed bill, the prospective home buyer can deduct that amount from his income taxes.

The legislation (H.R. 5769), sets up "individual housing accounts," similar to "individual retirement accounts" (IRAs). It's a simple but viable way to help home buyers who don't have a large equity they can move from one home to another.

Couples could put aside up to $10,000 a year, tax-free, for use as a down payment on a home. Interest earned on the accounts would also be tax-free.

Lagomarsino is rallying increasing support for his proposed bill, which is now co-sponsored by 27 members of the House. It is currently being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee.

When introducing the bill to his colleagues, Lagomarsino made the following points: "The demand for housing remains very strong and will grow substantially through the decade of the 1980s for first-time home buyers.

"Yet inflation and high interest rates have significantly reduced the number of first-time buyers in the market. A major hurdle facing those buyers is obtaining cash for the down payment.

"Owning a home is an important part of the American dream. This bill won't solve all the problems standing in the way of that dream, but it's a step in the right direction."

Testimony on Chino Hills plan concludes

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Some developers wanted greater densities for residential development, some residents wanted lower densities and some landowners hoped the end was near as the county Planning Commission concluded a round of testimony Thursday on the Chino Hills specific plan.

Commissioners heard a wide range of opinions during three meetings in the span of a week. The commission closed the hearing to further testimony and began workshop discussions on the massive specific plan to guide future development on more than 18,000 acres.

Renewed discussion was scheduled for this afternoon, with another workshop set for 9 a.m. May 10. At 9 a.m. May 14, the commission will reopen testimony and consider its recommendations to the county Board of Supervisors on the specific plan, now close to three years in the making.

The meetings will be held in the hearing room of Building No. 1 of County Center East, 1111 E. Mill St., San Bernardino.

Chuck Coe, associate county planner, said the Planning Department staff expects to have its responses to the testimony drafted by May 12.

No single consensus emerged from the hearings. Most of those testifying found objections with the land use guidelines for their property or for the property near their homes.

The speakers tended to be divided between residents who wanted to limit the density of future residential development and developers who sought to change the plan to expand development on their land.

David Beno, a Chino Hills resident, jokingly summed up the hearings by saying, "The plan must be a pretty good compromise since nobody seems to be happy with it."

However, while speakers picked at parts of the plan, several of them praised its overall direction.

William Lusk said, "As a developer, I think the opportunities that the Chino Hills specific plan affords are unique in the United States."

The county Board of Supervisors is tentatively scheduled to consider the specific plan on May 25.

The specific plan calls for eight villages with individual identities and a total of some 33,000 dwellings. The plan would allow a minimum of 27,000 residential units and a maximum of 33,000. Several residents said last week that overall density was too great.

On Thursday, Earl Nelson, Chino's city planner, reiterated the city's objections to the plan. He noted that one of the major goals of the specific plan was to direct future development away from dairies in the Chino area, but said the plan has no guarantees against urban intrusion for the dairies.

He also criticized the densities as higher than previous designations in the county general plan.

Beno and other residents in the English Road area urged the commission not to change the land use designation on close to 57 acres near their homes. English Road Investment Ltd. is seeking to increase the density from one unit per five acres to two units per acre.

Raymond Ribal, representing owners of some 2,000 acres in the southwest part of the planning area, complained that the property owners there were ignored by planning consultants and said restrictive standards would make development impractical.

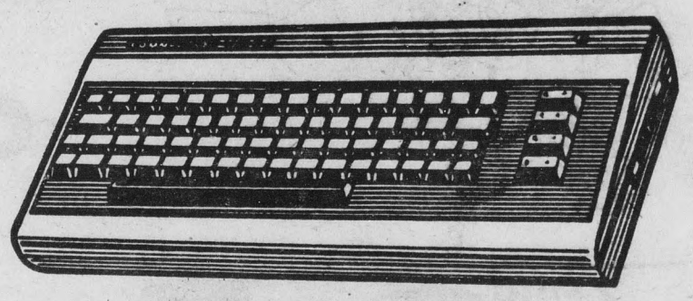

Ray Gelgur — a partner in a 32-acre community shopping center planned just west of the Corona Expressway — raised several objections to standards affecting his project.

And he criticized the plan for omitting Los Serranos, an established community, as one of the village names. As it stands, the center would be in Woodview Village. Gelgur also said that changing the name of part of Carbon Canyon Road to Dudley Avenue once that street is extended would be confusing and hurt businesses there.

Scientists hope to trick mosquitoes

By ROBERT P. STUDER
Copley News Service

RIVERSIDE — Mosquitoes have some pretty weird tastes, and if scientists at the University of California at Riverside have their way, those tastes may lead to the infuriating little insect's downfall.

Mosquitoes, which can transmit encephalitis, malaria and yellow fever — along with their unique ability to turn a pleasant evening into pure misery for anyone around — are turned on by sweat, blood and urine, especially urine from mice and cows.

And, once attracted by these delicious odors, a mosquito then homes in on dark colors and movement.

Such details about what attracts mosquitoes have more than just academic value. They may lead to development of an attraction agent that would be even more irresistible to a mosquito than the human neck.

They may also provide some answers to the old question of why one person seems to be eaten alive by mosquitoes on a summer's night while another luckier fellow may hardly be touched.

"Mosquitoes are drawn to high body temperature, skin moisture and the lactic acid in sweat, the female hormone estrogen, dark colors and movement," explains George Schultz, a postgraduate entomologist at UC Riverside. "All those factors vary among humans, which would indeed tend to make some people more attractive to them than others."

But Schultz and UCR entomologist Mir Mulla also hope to use the insect's preferences to develop a powerful attractant that could help bring the disease-carrier under control.

The question has taken on an added urgency. Heavy rains in many parts of the state, coupled with funding cutbacks for local mosquito abatement programs, have brought mosquitoes out in increasing numbers this spring.

Mosquito-control officials also have been fighting a losing battle with these pests, which have been developing resistance to traditional chemical weapons faster than man can develop new ones.

"If we could identify a powerful attractant and lure mosquitoes to it in the field, it could be used to draw them to confined areas away from residences, where insecticides could be used in smaller amounts more effectively," Schultz said. "The effects of pesticide would then be limited only to the target species."

This is no Johnny-come-lately study, however. Scientists have been probing mosquito attractants for more than 30 years, Schultz added. Although they have identified substances in perspiration and blood that attract mosquitoes, none by itself has been powerful enough to entice mosquitoes away from their usual warm-blooded prey. Lactic acid, for instance, seems to work well in the laboratory, but not in the field.

Mice and cow urine, however, offers a whole new field of research — for it seems to be even more attractive to mosquitoes than sweat.

Meanwhile, another UCR researcher, chemist Yih-Shen Hwang, is busy separating mouse urine into many small fractions and testing the effects on mosquitoes in an effort to pin down the single most attractive ingredient.

Mosquitoes, Schultz said, "are believed to fly or rest several feet above the ground until they pick up any of numerous signals from nearby prey. One such is carbon dioxide, emitted rrom the skin and lungs. Dry ice, which forms carbon dioxide, currently is being used in the field to trap mosquitoes and determine population counts.

The pests can pick up the smell of carbon dioxide and odors such as estrogen and lactic acid as far away as 50 or 100 feet. Suddenly alerted, the mosquito takes flight upwind, Schultz said, and once it is within several feet of the target it homes in on heat and moisture from the body of the prey, like a heat-seeking missile, until it sees its victim. And if it detects movement and dark colors, these provide additional stimuli to land and bite.

The research at UC Riverside, which is being funded by the Metropolitan Mosquito Abatement District in Minnesota and the U.S. Army, is particularly interested in mosquitoes that carry yellow fever.
